A day to remember

One sunny day in the morning , I decided to walk around the city . I was so excited to explore new places . I didn't need a map because I thought I knew the way.

I was walking down a few streets, but soon everything started to look same. suddenly, I didn't recognize anything. I checked my phone, but the battery was almost dead. The streets were quiet and I didn't see anyone around . I started to feel scared because I didn't know where I was. After a while, I saw a small shop and I went inside to ask for help. The shopkeeper was nice. She told me how to go back to the main street and she also let me charge my phone.

I was so happy, but I also learnt that is always good to have a map when you are exploring.

The value : It's solidarity because when I was lost and I felt scared, the shopkeeper was nice and she helped me to find my way and she let me charge my phone too.

A DAY TO REMEMBER

A few years ago in the city of TETOUAN, my family and I went to a beautiful beach on the northern coast of Morocco. It was a warm and sunny day and we were hyped to swim in the sea and play beach ball. Once we arrived there, we noticed that the place was crowded with visitors.

My family and I set up a place and ready to swim in the water. My cousins and I happily jumped into the water. It was warm, but we eventually managed to cool off our bodies. After a few hours of swimming in the sea and playing volleyball, I got exhausted. While I was getting out of the water, a sea snake bit me in the leg. I immediately felt nausea and headaches.

Shortly after that, my leg started to swell up. My cousin was the first to act and instantly got me out of the water. I was quickly driven to the nearest hospital.

My family were very worried about my health, but I fortunately managed to make a full recovery thanks to the doctor's medicine.

This story shows that family cares about you more than anything in the world and your family members can always clutch up in these hard situations, It also highlights that friendship is the key out of hardships in life. For me, this was truly an unforgettable day.

A Day to remember

- One day in the mountains, my family and I and some family's close friends went for hiking. They have a daughter. she's my age. We went a little far from them to see the huge mountains and we lost the way back to our family.

We found a big tree and we sat under it. On the next day morning, we started walking and we met our family after hours and hours and we finished the hiking and went back home

The value to learn from this story is to be patient.

A day to remember

Last summer, I went with my friend to the forest and it was nice. Boys were playing football and girls were cooking.

Suddenly, a boy climbed a tree. We were so afraid. At a moment, he lost his balance and fell down. We screamed out of fear. We thought he was dead. We called the ambulance. It arrived at the right time. They took him to the hospital. But fortunately, he only had minor injuries.

He was very lucky and everyone was happy, but it was the most dangerous accident I have ever seen. The values:

I chose responsibility because when the boy climbed the tree, he lost his balance and he fell down and he wasn't aware of what would happen.
